on Lebanon

The Secretary-General has taken note of the fifth postponement of the Lebanese Presidential election beyond the term of the current incumbent. He regrets this development and urges all parties to maintain calm as well as to further intensify efforts to reach a compromise as soon as possible.

The Secretary-General is deeply concerned at the fragility of the situation in Lebanon and is following events very carefully. Both he and his Special Coordinator for Lebanon are in close touch with key players in Lebanon, in the region and beyond. The Secretary-General urges all parties to live up to their responsibilities and to act within the constitutional framework as well as in a peaceful and democratic manner.
